This structure is used for ESD (Electro Static Discharge) protection of electrical components and other uses. However, in a structure in which thin layers of transparent conductive materials are disposed on the inner surfaces of plastic members, problems with abrasion and delamination of the transparent conductive materials due to friction and the like arise. To overcome such problems, Patent Literature 1 below proposes a conductive coating film which is formed by dispersing particles of a silicone resin, etc. in an organic binder. Patent Literature 2 below proposes a method of forming a transparent conductive film by dispersing fine particles of aluminum and fine particles of a fluorine-containing resin, such as a perfluoropolyether, in an organic binder. Patent Literature 3 below proposes a transparent conductive coating film in which fine particles of a fluorine-containing resin such as a perfluoroalkyl polyether are dispersed in an organic binder. Patent Literature 4 below proposes a method of forming a coating film of a fluorinecontaining elastomer on the surface of a plastic substrate, by mixing fine particles of a fluorine-containing resin in a fluorine-containing elastomer and kneading the resulting mixture. Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to a method of determining a downlink transmission parameter and a mobile communication device using the same. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method of determining a transmission parameter that can determine a more appropriate initial transmission power for a downlink channel in a mobile communication system, and a mobile communication device using the same. Description of the Related Art Mobile communication systems have been developed for the purpose of providing a communication service to users through wireless network coverage. 3e33713323
