When we began work on 2016, we started with the same objective as 2015: take the game to new heights. 2016 was a year of growth for many reasons. Our Game development team headed by Matt Rix and James Brown were tasked with implementing new features for how players can interact with the game including making an in-game browser. This was a challenging process for us, but it added a lot of polish to the game. Later in the year we added our signature feature: block-building. We also introduced a web-based interface for players to upload art, explore different game modes and more. The

Why are many XSLT 2.0 processors/compiler fixed width/fixed length? What are the advantages/disadvantages of this approach? Are there any plans to change this? Is there any discussion around this anywhere, other than on SE? Note: I'm thinking not only processors/compiler, but even the older XSLT 1.0. A: The biggest disadvantage of fixed width/fixed length processors is that they are fixed width. They can not recognize expressions like A B C... which are higher order functions. Therefore, you cannot pass back a record, map, etc. Instead you have to pass back a string of characters, or XML. Consider:
