What's new in Killing Floor - Harold Lott Character Pack:

of Madness The Tide of Madness is a six-part British television horror drama, co-written and directed by John Mackenzie. It was made by Shooting Star Productions for the BBC and first broadcast on BBC One in 2002. The serial revolves around an unhinged scientist, Joseph, who cuts open pregnant women to extract their foetuses in order to unlock a genetic code for immortality. Joseph is eventually hunted down by a special taskforce within the police, who believe that he may be leading a group of the newly-discovered Easter Rising ex-RAF servicemen, many of whom have been admitted to a secret psychiatric facility. Mackenzie, a film maker, wrote the scripts for several of his own films before The Tide of Madness was made. The series featured Mackenzie's wife, Victoria, as Moll. Elizabeth Haynes, Lance Riddell and Alan Williams respectively portrayed the doctor, Chief of Staff and police detective. In response to the first episode, a small controversy arose in relation to the on-screen portrayal of Irish people by Anglo-Irish actress Haynes, who some believed was portraying members of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) with poor accents. Episodes five and six of the serial were repeated on BBC2 within 24 hours of the BBC1 broadcasts, to accommodate high viewing figures. The Tide of Madness was controversial during its initial run, winning several critical panning reviews, but it has since gained a cult following and been included in a number of lists of the best television programmes. Production Mackenzie, a movie maker before he became a television writer/producer, approached Shooting Star Productions to write the scripts for a new television project. He wanted to write a different kind of drama, saying: "we're used to seeing people dying". His scripts for the series featured several characters who had already appeared in his previous projects, such as In the Bleak Midwinter. The storyline of The Tide of Madness drew upon events that had previously occurred in The Children of the Hawk (1996) and Honey for Tea (1998), a short film that Mackenzie also directed. The bulk of the script was written while Mackenzie was in prison, although it also took him two and a half years to write the script. He wrote the first draft of the episode in fifteen days, a testament to the concentration that he aimed to maintain at the outset. The director only read the first episode after it was complete, viewing the scenes with an entirely different mindset
