Click it and blow Blowing Out the Chicken AT least A.D. will stop, for a little while, to blow out the chicken. Not since 1968, anyway. Every time the senator gets a new found lover, he gets a new pet cause. Now the cause is the issue of ending the chicken-dispensing practice of the Salt Pop. After first defying his parents to vote for it back in 1966 when everyone else in the district was voting against it because they hated Lyndon Johnson, he now wants to make sure that it stays in place.

Some barriers to the integration of home care services for older Canadians. Within the Canadian health care system, home care is defined as care provided by health professionals in the patient's home setting. The Canadian Institute of Health Information estimates that 2.7 million Canadians use home care services annually and currently, the services are provided in 2.5 million homes through 15,000 agencies. The objective of this study was to identify those barriers that hinder integration of home care services. A two-step survey design was used to identify and describe the barriers that presently hinder integration of home care services. The first step was to generate barriers via problem solving and the second step was to use qualitative methods to explore the results. The most significant barriers reported were: a lack of knowledge regarding appropriate utilization of services and government policies/reporting requirements. In addition, the data revealed that financial constraints, a lack of policies, and a lack of workforce to facilitate service delivery were also barriers identified. Some of the barriers to the integration of home care services cannot be addressed without supportive policy action and more appropriate funding.

Dear Editor, A 75-year-old woman with a history of hypertension, pulmonary emphysema, hypercholesterolemia, and aortic stenosis presented with a persistent sore throat. Computed tomography (CT) of the neck, chest and abdomen demonstrated a hypodense mass in the left thyroid lobe, most likely a lymphadenopathy, as well as paratracheal lymphadenopathy, and an enlarged left lobe of the thyroid gland with an extension to the left level II (Fig. 1{ref-type="fig"}). A fine needle aspiration of the left lobe of the thyroid gland was suggestive of metastasis from a previously unknown adenocarcinoma (Fig. 2{ref-type="fig"}), and both CT of the abdomen and a 0cc13bf012

Molecular docking and molecular dynamics studies of paracetamol-beta-cyclodextrin inclusion complexes. The inclusion complex formation between paracetamol and β -cyclodextrin was investigated using molecular docking and molecular dynamics (MD) simulation methods. Full and semi-empirical (PM3) energy-based molecular docking methods were applied to design the paracetamol- β -cyclodextrin inclusion complex, with the aim of finding the stable conformations and the energy minimum positions of the conformations on the free energy landscape. The energy surface analysis was presented through the detailed conformational analysis for different conformers of the complex. All of the best-docked conformers of the complex were kept in the simulation box. MD simulations for the whole complexes in solution under different conditions (300 K, 100 K, and 0 K) for 100 ns were performed. The values of root-mean-square deviation (RMSD) and root-mean-square fluctuation (RMSF) were extracted for prediction of the stability of the complex. The RMSD value was as small as 2.09 Å at 0 K for the newly designed complex, and the RMSF was as large as 1.00 Å for both (free) drug and cyclodextrin at 0 K. This suggests that the newly designed complex was stable during the MD simulation.
