Here we have the most successful song on the album and one which is not very original. Throughout the song, Beyonce displays a very strong voice, but she loses her ability to breath, which makes it hard to keep the song from becoming incredibly monotonous. I personally love this song because it shows off the singer;s ability as a vocalist as well as the singer on her own merit, giving us all one of the best Divas performed in many years. It could almost be a soundtrack for a Movie, with the most prominent line being the iconic: Imma get me a cut and Beyonces vocals creating many different variations of that phrase throughout the song. I wouldnt be able to lie, but I would also love it if she included more music towards the end of the song. It would go from this Imma get me a cut to nothing. You might be able to guess that its the only metal and heavy influence on the record, considering that its the only song with screaming vocals, which are usually geared towards a Heavy Metal audience. But it doesnt do much else, and is most likely a good way for the artist to let us know she feels comfortable with Metal fans. In fact, she had been experimenting with it for a few years and ive always enjoyed her when she does. But as a concept, i dont think this song really does anything besides put more pressure on Beyonce to maintain quality as she goes forward, like when she did with Ride, Future and past, Listen Now and Haunted. Yes, it took 13 years to get here, but 4 was a long time coming. Maybe its a brave journey Beyonce took and made the most of it. The end result? 4 is a masterpiece, the best project she's ever put out and easily her most impressive work to date, even without considering the controversy about her pregnancy that followed it's release. Another great album in the grand tradition of B'Day and Beyonce.
