you can get a windows 10 home, pro, or enterprise edition that expires at the end of the month from the microsoft store, or from some third-party vendors, such as amazon and newegg. an end-of-month expiration may not always be what you want. for instance, if you choose a version of windows that expires a month earlier, that may mean that you will have to upgrade your pc in that time period or risk losing access to your pc if you forget to renew it. if youre already on a free or trial edition of windows, you can upgrade to a full version of windows 10 for free. or, if you already have a version of windows, you can upgrade to a full version of windows 10. to get the free upgrade, simply sign in to windows with your microsoft account, select the choose your plan if youre on a free or trial edition of windows that expires at the end of the month, and then select upgrade now. if you are prompted for a product key, this is the key that must be entered to activate the key after the product key is redeemed and verified. if you see a change key dialog, it indicates that the redeemed key will expire after a specific amount of time. change keys may be issued as part of a promotion or in response to some event, such as a security breach. if you want to upgrade to windows 10 enterprise, select the enterprise plan here. you will be prompted for your current windows key, and a window will pop up saying that you can redeem your product key or enter a new one. in this scenario, its a bit problematic as the windows store is requesting to find your original windows activation key for the current pc so the windows store can check it. that seems like it should be a pretty important thing and i'd kind of like to not have to go through a whole process to tell the windows store that i already have a valid windows activation key. 5ec8ef588b
